VICHY FRANCE IS APPEALING TO U. S. FOR ECONOMIC HELP

In Need of Aid So As To Better Resist Pressure of The Germans

NAZIS BOOST DEMANDS

Ambassador Henry-Haye To Confer With President Roosevelt Tomorrow

By Kingsbury Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 7.—(INS)—Responsible sources in Washington today disclosed that Vichy France is appealing to the United States for American economic assistance to help Marshal Henri Petain resist increased German pressure on his government.

French Ambassador Gaston Heny-Haye is scheduled to confer with President Roosevelt on the matter tomorrow.

Germany is understood to be stiffening its attitude toward Vichy as a result of the following two developments:

1—Petain's refusal to reinstate former Vice Premier Pierre Laval, leader of the pro-German collaborationist movement, in the government;

2—Petain's action in giving the United States definite new assurances that France will render no military aid to the Axis powers.

It can now be revealed that these assurances have been put in writing, and are responsible for the recently improved relations between the State Department and Vichy.

Infuriated by this gesture of friendship toward the United States and Petain's refusal to agree to closer collaboration with the Axis, Germany is refusing to permit the shipment of wheat from the occupied zone to the unoccupied areas of France. The Nazis furthermore are reported to be threatening to treat the unoccupied areas with extreme severity.

In order to help the French people resist this increased German pressure, Ambassador Henry-Haye intends to ask President Roosevelt for the right to purchase food in this country for the unoccupied areas as well as for the French war prisoners still held in German camps.

The French envoy wants to purchase the food with "frozen" French funds and ship it to France aboard French merchant ships.

Vichy feels that distribution of American food among the French people not only will strengthen their

Langhorne Resident Held After Fatal Crash

ABINGTON, Pa., Apr. 7.—(INS)—William A. Locher, 42, of Glenside, and George H. Raven, Jr., of Langhorne, were being held for investigation today following an automobile collision which cost the life of Locher's 78-year-old father, Fred.

Locher died in Abington Memorial Hospital shortly after the car in which he was riding with his son collided with Raven's vehicle at Sansquehanna Road and Limekiln Pike, Upper Dublin township.

Police chief James Ottinger, of Upper Dublin, who ordered the investigation, said the cars were involved in a "right-angle" smash-up. Raven was driving a sedan-hearse owned by an undertaker in Wycombe, Bucks county.

Turner Ashby Serves As Chairman of Show, Dance

Turner W. Ashby, Edgely, is chairman of the Bristol district for the second annual show and dance of the Federation of Telephone Workers of Pennsylvania, to be held at the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, on April 10th.

Also serving on the committee are: William Terneson and James Stuart, both of Bristol.

As a patriotic gesture, the Federation this year will invite servicemen in uniform to the event. Tickets for servicemen may be secured at any U. S. O. Headquarters or from any members on the committee.

Feature of this year's event will be eight acts of vaudeville; and a nationally known orchestra which will play for dancing from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

TROOPS IN ICELAND READY FOR ACTION

Commanding General Says Forces Are Prepared For Any Eventuality

EACH DAY A WORK DAY

By William W. Wade
(I. N. S. War Correspondent)

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Apr. 7.—(INS)—One of America's key leaders in the battle of the Atlantic, the fight against Adolf Hitler's U-boats, is a man nameless on navy rolls—a lifelong soldier who has sailed the seas only to find land on which to fight.

He is Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel, commander of the American Army forces in Iceland, a West Point graduate who has spent long years with troops and at the army's schools in preparation for his vital command.

General Bonesteel finds no anomaly in being thrust in the middle of what has been essentially a naval war. He explained recently that his troops play their part in a cycle—they defend the harbors where big gray warships and sleek destroyers take on coal and oil, they in turn are protected and supplied by the navy.

Today, with reports that the Tirpitz has been based at Trondheim, with reports of other Nazi military activity in Norway less than 900 miles from here, the possibilities that Iceland's cycle of defenses may be tested increase with the lengthening days of the North Atlantic.

On these possibilities General Bonesteel refused to speculate but he said:

Newportville S. S. Conducts Easter Program, Sunday

NEWPORTVILLE, Apr. 7.—Easter was observed in Newportville Sunday School on Sunday morning. The associate superintendent, Raymond Perente, opened the services by offering prayer, then turned the program over to Mrs. R. Dewees, superintendent of the primary department.

The following took part: "Welcome," Dorothy Cotshott; Easter song, entire department; recitation, Carol Cotshott; "Best Way," Helen Hahnemann; "We're Glad For Easter," Harry Robinson; Easter verse, Eleanor Oldham; recitation, Dolores Houck and Dolores Kelly; "Angel of Victory," Myron Mattocks; "What Easter Means to Me," George Schumacher; "I'm Glad," William Wimmersberger; recitation, John Lewis; "Easter Day Is Here," Robert Greeby, Joyce and Eleanor Houck, Grace Barclay, Thomas Pinto, Margaret Potts, and Robert Neesic; "Parting Word," Walter Gillette.

C. Burnley White then spoke to the children, using a live rabbit to illustrate his talk. The Misses Elva Brambley and Frances Mattocks favored with a duet, accompanied by Misses Louisa Kohler at the piano, and Janet Mattocks on the mandolin.

The Rev. J. Grottenhale spoke briefly to the children. Mrs. Kohler's class sang an Easter song, and the girls of Mrs. Perente's class, and members of the Junior Fellowship also sang.

At church, the choir rendered special anthems for the Easter service.

BANDIT TRIO ENTER GUILTY PLEAS TO HOLD-UP OF GARAGE ATTENDANT

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 7.—Three members of an alleged "five-man bandit gang" who staged a hold-up of a Bristol garage attendant on March 1, 1937, entered pleas of guilty in court here today to the charge of robbery, larceny and receiving stolen goods. The pleas were heard by Judge Calvin S. Boyer.

Those before the court were Thomas McGrath, 22; Edward McGrath, 23; and Thomas Welsh, 26, all of Philadelphia.

The trio was of a gang of five which early on the morning of March 1, 1937, held-up, beat and robbed William Murry, 68, father-in-law of Raymond Wright, who operated the garage at Batk and Otter streets. Murry attended the garage for his son-in-law who was asleep in a room over the garage. Murry was robbed of $18 in cash and severely beaten over the head.

Murry told the court of the hold-up and of the bandits tying him up and

JUDGE KELLER GIVES OPINION IN BANK CASE

Makes Ruling in Case of Secretary of Banking for Cornwells State Bank

AND IN LANDRETH CASE

Judge Boyer Hands Down Decree Affecting Bucks County Theatre

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 7.—Judge Keller handed down an opinion in Court of Common Pleas in case of John C. Bell, Jr., Secretary of Commonwealth of Penna., receiver of Cornwells State Bank, against Frankford Trust Company and Gertrude Thomas, trustee under the will of Otto Zschamisch, deceased.

In this case the Prothonotary is directed to give notice to these findings of facts, etc., and if no exceptions are filed thereto within 30 days after service of such notice, judgment is to be entered thereon by the Prothonotary or clerk in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant for $617.95, which judgment shall become final.

With President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer on the bench during a session of miscellaneous court yesterday, trial lists for the April term of argument court and of civil and equity court were arranged. Argument court with one case in Orphans' Court and nine in Common Pleas got underway Monday, April 13.

With 35 cases listed in the Court of Common Pleas and two in equity, civil court will begin Monday, April 20.

In the Court of Common Pleas, Judge Boyer, in a sur affidavit of defense raising questions of law in the case of Wesley D. Simon versus D. Landreth Seed Company, a corp., ruled that the question of law raised by the defendant's affidavit of defense are overruled with leave to the defendant to file an answer to the facts within 15 days from the date of April 6, 1942.

Two divorces were granted as follows:

Joseph Rizzo, Kintnersville, from Teresa Rizzo, Phila., on grounds of desertion. They were married Feb. 3, 1938.

Dora F. Mastrocola, Bristol Pize, Cornwells Heights, from Charles Mastrocola, Croydon, on grounds of desertion in 1939. They were married in 1938.

President Judge Keller ruled in the

YOUNG WOMAN BURNED AS SHE TRIPS, FALLS

Bensalem Township Miss Was Hurrying To Help Mother Fight Grass Fire

TREATED AT HOSPITAL

Tripping as she hurried to aid her mother in conquering a brush fire which got out of control yesterday, Miss Josephine Mrozicka, Knights Road, Bensalem Township, was burned slightly about the face, hands and ankles; her hair also being singed.

The young woman, seeing that fire had gone beyond the bounds of their immediate yard, and was fast spreading through adjoining lots, hurried to help the older woman. As she tripped and fell, the flames licked about her face, her ankles above short socks, and also burned the backs of her hands.

Taken to the Harriman Hospital, she

Request Individuals To Enroll For First-Aid Work

It is requested by Jesse Carr, of Croydon, that any individuals in Bristol, Croydon, Newportville, Tullytown, or Edgely, who hold Red Cross standard or advanced first aid course cards, and who are willing to aid at the time of any disaster, contact individuals listed below. The services of those not serving as air raid wardens or as emergency police are solicited.

Those interested are asked to send their names and addresses to any one of the following: Mrs. Reba Goebig, James Patterson, Bristol R. D. 2; Charles Wallmenich, Croydon; Joseph Peirce, Radcliffe and Lafayette streets, Bristol.

Did You See It?

(By "The Stroller")

In days gone by the trimming of the "Easter Egg Tree" was an event as much anticipated by the girls and boys in the family as was the basket of eggs left by the Easter "Bunny" for their consumption.

The gaily colored shells of hen's eggs were placed on a small tree on the lawn, decking it as brightly as any Christmas tree. The custom has waned with the years, but Bristol has at least one such this year. It is located in a lawn on Market street, and the dozens of egg shells are every color of the rainbow.

Linen Shower Arranged; Miss Kratz is Feted

CROYDON, Apr. 7.—Miss Dorothy Kratz, Croydon, was pleasantly surprised at a linen shower arranged by Miss Helen Campbell and Miss Elizabeth Tyler at the latter's home, on Thursday evening.

The decorative plan was in spring colors and the gifts for Miss Kratz were arranged beneath a sprinkling can. Refreshments were served from the table attractively decorated with a miniature bridal party in satin and lace. The favors were miniature bridal bouquets.

PRESBYTERIANS CONDUCT CONGREGATIONAL SESSION

Re-Elect Two Trustees and Two Elders for Terms of Three Years

REPORTS PRESENTED

A meeting of the corporation of the Bristol Presbyterian Church, last evening, was followed by the annual congregational session. Dr. Frank Lehman presided at the corporation meeting, and the pastor, the Rev. James R. Gailey, was the presiding officer at the latter meeting.

During the corporation meeting reports of the trustees and property committee were given, the latter being by Abraham Bustran. In this account mention was made of the new heating system installed in the manse; repairs to the primary room and renovations to the church basement. Trustees Robert C. Riehl and Mr. Bustran were re-elected for terms of three years.

Reports of various groups were presented at the congregational meeting.

One Man's Opinion By WALTER KIERNAN (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

New York's NYA Symphony Orchestra has played its last soulful opus on the Federal payroll.

Even the salvage crew which is trying to save NYA before it goes down for the third time couldn't claim that a B-flat sax player was essential to our war effort.

The NYA orchestra was two years old and dedicated to the proposition that all growing boys should have a cut of the great American taxpayers' dollar.

In time an NYA musician who kept his strings tight and his own bow waxed might hope to graduate to the WPA music project.

The WPA musicians play from the same composers but do not have Aubrey Williams for concert master.

What the WPA orchestras—there are a dozen in New York—should be playing as their theme song now is "They Didn't Know What Time It Was," dedicated to the Bureau boys.

It's later than they think.

Thought for the day: Remember Rome!

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

Heavy Casualties as Bataan Battle Nears Crisis

Washington—With the battle of Bataan nearing a crisis, the War Department today reported continued fierce encounters with heavy casualties on both sides as it disclosed that the war against Japan is still being conducted by the valiant Dutch from the jungles and mountains of inner Java.

Concerning the Philippine fighting, the Army's communique stated that the enemy is continuing heavy attacks on the center of Lieut. Gen. Wainwright's lines "with some success."

The news from Jap-held Java came via Australia, following a conference there between Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Dr. Hubertus Van Mook, acting head of the Netherlands Indies government.

Atmosphere of Hope Prevails in India

New Delhi—An atmosphere of reviving hope prevailed today as Sir Stafford Cripps went forward with his delicate Indian independence negotiations under the watchful eye of Col. Louis Johnson, President Roosevelt's special envoy to India.

Johnson was reported to be in almost constant touch with the White House as Cripps once again received Indian leaders.

No definite idea of the present attitude of the all India National Congress party was obtainable pending a working committee meeting this afternoon, but observers thought that some adjustments, especially about defense, may have been made in its original draft declaration.

Meanwhile, Britain's reply to Indian demands for modifications in the proffered plan for post war independence was believed delivered to Cripps.

15 Hurt in Trolley-Truck Collision

Philadelphia—Fifteen persons, most of them enroute to work in war industries, were injured today when a loaded gasoline trailer truck of the Atlantic Refining Company collided head on with a trolley car near the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

Those hurt were standing in aisles of the crowded street car. The force of the impact, which smashed the fronts of both vehicles, hurled the standing passengers to the floor. None was seriously injured, according to hospital physicians.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE UNITS OF FOUR DISTRICTS PARADE HERE IN FIRST DEMONSTRATION SINCE ORGANIZATION

1200 March and Are Reviewed by Defense Officials As They Pass Municipal Building — Bensalem District Makes Fine Showing — Four Bands Furnish Music

Emergency Police and Air-Raid Wardens from Bristol Borough, Tullytown, Bristol Township, and Bensalem Township paraded here last night in celebration of Army Day and in response to the request of President Franklin D. Roosevelt that a parade be held.

It was a fine demonstration of the civilian defense units which are organized for the protection of the community and its people. It is estimated that approximately 1200 men and a few women participated.

Reviewing the marchers in front of the Municipal Building were Burgess Clifford L. Anderson; Mrs. Horace N. Davis and Mrs. M. D. Weagley, of the Bristol Defense Council; Walter Pitzonka, Bucks County Boy Scout Council; Mrs. Martha Woolley, executive secretary of the Bucks County Defense Council; and Clifford Beck, assistant chief of the Emergency Police in the Middle Bucks County area. Mr. Beck represented Felix Gowan, chief of the Doylestown Police Department, who is also chief of the Emergency Police in the Middle Bucks County area.

Mrs. Morris Worob Dies; Lived Here 53 Years

A long-time resident of Bristol died yesterday when Mrs. Etta Worob, widow of Morris Worob succumbed to an illness of five months at her home, Dorrance and Wood streets. Death was due to a complication.

Mrs. Worob was a native of Russia and came to the United States and directly to Bristol 53 years ago. For a number of years the Worobs were engaged in business at Penn and Wood streets and then later moved to Dorrance and Wood streets where for many years they conducted a dry goods and notions business.

The deceased is survived by two daughters, Miss Miriam, of Bristol, and Dr. Sarah Worob Rossien, and two granddaughters, Key Garden, Long Island.

Burial took place this morning in Har Nebo Cemetery, Frankford.

Egg Hunts Are Much Enjoyed On Holiday

Two Easter egg hunts conducted on Easter Monday delighted children in Eddington and Langhorne sections.

The hunt which was sponsored by the Sunday School of Eddington Presbyterian Sunday School was for hen's dyed eggs, the eggs having been hidden on the Harangan farm, Newportville Road, by boys who last year were members of the primary department.

As the boys then awaited for the primary department scholars to arrive to begin the hunt, the pastor, the Rev. Arthur D. Sargis conducted a short devotional service in the church lecture room. He told the girls and boys of the great privilege they have in participating in a hunt for eggs, as in England and other parts of the world eggs are closely rationed.

Automobiles were used to transport the children to the place where the eggs were hidden, and the hunt for 16 dozen eggs, donated by members of the congregation got underway. Later the children pooled the eggs they found, and these were then divided among the group. Each child received a card containing a Bible verse as a memento of the hunt. Miss Miriam F. Peters, of Bridgewater, then told of some of her experiences during her stay in Africa.

The Langhorne Lions Club conducted the hunts in that community on the grounds of Langhorne Spring Water Co. Children invited were those of schools of that area, grades one to four, inclusive; also children of preschool age. Chocolate marshmallow eggs and glazed marshmallow eggs, encased in cellophane bags were hidden. Some bags contained numbers for prizes, the finders being required to call at business places in the community for their awards. Prizes totaled 150. Nearly 500 children took part. The chairman of the committee was Earl Tomlinson, a member of the Langhorne Lions Club, and governor of District 14-A of Pennsylvania Lions.

TIME IS PATIENT

The warrior's trail of the sun has now been completed in the Orient. The Hun's path of fire, murder and pillage has reached around the globe, and the Occident, which obtained the roots of its culture and also its religion from the East, is now begging for help from the cradles of the world's oldest recorded civilizations—China and India. Egyptian civilization may have antedated both the Indian and Chinese. But today Egypt is a land of the scorched past, and India and China emerge as two nations vitalized and vibrant.

Indians are interested most in metaphysical speculation and theistic inquiry. The Chinese have been concerned most with interpersonal, interfamily and interstate relations. The Indian mind is imaginative and transcendental; the Chinese mind is more realistic and practically rational. Yet as far back as the Tang dynasty Chinese pilgrims visited the Ganges, and Indians perennially have gone to China to study art, literature and philosophy.

So when Chiang Kai-Shek, a generalissimo of China's 450,000,000 went to India to rally its 350,000,000 against the Japanese, he asked two old neighbors to co-operate in a temporary abandonment of their non-militaristic life. A toughening national renaissance now is sweeping all of the East.

Gandhi and Chiang must have smiled over their simple food as they conferred all day February 18th on how to rid the Orient of white domination by helping the whites defeat the Japanese. Tokyo has been howling for a decade, "Asia for the Asians." Chiang and Gandhi would broaden that slogan to read: "Asia for all the Asians."

Certainly Stafford Cripps will offer India nearly anything to keep "Britain's richest jewel" in London emperor's crown. Certainly Washington has offered much to induce wily Chiang to appoint American General Stilwell as one of his field commanders.

RION TRIAL BACKFIRES

It's always a pleasure to see one of Adolf Hitler's pet schemes blow up in his face—and apparently the Rion trial belongs in that category.

The Rion trial of persons accused of responsibility for France's defeat was supposed to fix upon the defendants the actual guilt for starting the war. But it appears that this was too huge a task for even a Vichy court and nothing of the sort has eventuated. The trial has merely served to emphasize France's hopeless military situation in the face of German efficiency and the well-planned Nazi program of attack. If anything, the trial has been an arraignment of Germany as the purposeful, methodical aggressor and the establishment of France as the ineffectual victim.

The whole proceeding has been such a boomerang that now it has been suspended until April 15th and some sources say that there is doubt of its resumption. It can be put down as a strategic defeat for Hitler in the political field. And as another blow at Hitler's supposed infallibility, it can also be put down as the possible forerunner of defeats in the military field.

It is weeks since the Japs made any gains. If they have been stopped by the mere arrival of General MacArthur in Australia, it is easy to see what will happen when he gets his offensive started.

Crime at Castaway by EDITH BRISTOL

SYNOPSIS

Desperately in need of work, Gerry Lane decides to become secretary to Walter Gregg, wealthy contractor and owner of Castaway Ranch, despite the hidden warning of the employment agency manager. Two other girls had tried the job and come back in a few days. What was the mystery about "Castaway"? Gerry telephones a Miss Baldwin, her predecessor, seeking an answer to that question. The latter tells her the people there "got me down." "They're just queer." So—forewarned—Gerry goes to Castaway. There she meets Estelle Gregg, the contractor's wife, a sophisticated, bleach-blond; Sydney Loftus, Estelle's cynical son; Martha, Gregg's middle-aged sister, who manages the household and breeds race horses; and Harry Craven, Gregg's business manager, a dapper, moustached individual with piercing black eyes. Gerry does not meet her employer the first night. Recuperating from an automobile accident, he has already retired.

CHAPTER THREE

The outer door closed and a quick step crossed the hall and living room.

"Here comes the last member to complete our happy family party," Loftus managed somehow to give a note of mockery to even the simplest words. "Our noble Sir Lanceford! Miss Lane, let me present Lanceford! My stepfather's nephew. He rides about righting wrongs."

Lance Gregg bowed stiffly. He was a sunbrowned young giant in riding breeches and leather jacket with the signature of sun and salt and wind written on his lean, dark face.

This one, I thought, is the silent one. One was sleek—that would be Loftus with his mocking manner, like a man playing a role on the stage. One was sharp—that would be Craven, with his keen, black eyes, darting from one person to another and his air of continual watching. And one—that must be this broad-shouldered young horseman—was silent. My predecessor had epitomized them all too well.

But it was the silent one who made the most impression on the desultory and disconnected dinner table conversation. Miss Gregg gave orders to the white-coated boy—I couldn't tell whether it was Issu or another who looked just like him. Mrs. Gregg and Sydney did most of the talking, about motion pictures, mostly. Hits they were going to see when they drove up to the city tomorrow. Craven's restless eyes shifted from one to another of the diners and I hardly spoke—so it was Lance Gregg whose words first suggested the undercurrents running beneath the surface of life at Castaway.

"Are there guests in the cabin at Hidden Cove?" he asked. Estelle shook her masses of yellow curls. "Mine come next week." Craven and Loftus said "no" with emphasis and at the same instant. "I looked that cabin myself," said Miss Gregg. "It's empty."

"There's someone there tonight," Lance said. "I rode down the trail and saw smoke from the chimney and a light in the window."

"I'm going to call Nathan Allen," Martha struck the table so hard her silver bracelets rattled. "Every tramp in the country who wants a bed breaks into that cabin and my houseboys have to replace what's stolen and clean up the place."

"Better not until I ride up to see if they really are uninvited guests," counseled Lance. "Maybe Uncle Walter gave permission to use the cabin."

"Maybe it's friends of Worth Durfee and you'll get a charge of durfee for a welcome," suggested Loftus. "The way he feels right now he'd welcome a slight case of murder."

"Don't call the sheriff until you hear from me, will you, Aunt Martha?" urged Lance. "I'll ride up right after dinner and find out."

Conversation lagged. Mrs. Gregg managed the business and Martha and her son spoke a few words about their early morning start. Craven said something about a telephone call. Miss Gregg told about the trouble she'd had with housebreakers. Over it all I could feel a sense of tension and foreboding. It went with me as I found a book in the living room and crossed the garden slope to my cottage.

Who was at Hidden Cove? Why were the members of the household so upset over the presence of unknown guests? Who was Worth Durfee and why would he welcome into a mile of highway. Now I hire them to spell for me."

I learned that Mrs. Gregg and Sydney spent much of their time in an apartment on Russian Hill in San Francisco; that Craven was managing the business and Martha Gregg managed the household; that Lance had been called from his last year in engineering at the University of California to help his uncle after the accident.

All that October day I filed and sorted papers, took dictation and typed, while outside the open windows Castaway basked, warm and brown and fragrant in the autumn sunshine, and the distant surf pounded on the rocks.

When Kobe, Mr. Gregg's personal servant, came to wheel the chair out of the study at noon, my em-

"I'm going to call Sheriff Allen!" Martha struck the table so hard her silver bracelets rattled.

"a slight case of murder?" What was Craven watching for? I turned on my light before it was completely dark—I didn't even write another word in the diary—but I did lock my door carefully.

Within the first five minutes after I reported for work in Walter Gregg's study, I knew that I was working for a strong, unhappy man—and I liked him.

By the end of the first hour I had a fair idea of the way he wanted things done—and I knew he was afraid of something.

My diary says: "October 2. Mr. Gregg sits in a wheel chair with his left leg stretched straight in front, his left shoulder lifted in a plaster cast. He's about 50. His face is weathered from work in the wind and sun—but bleached now from being in the hospital so long. He's gruff and brusque, seems to have a lot of pain and is dreadfully worried over something. He seems fearful—but not cross to the people who work for him. His papers are in a dreadful mess from being neglected so long—but I know I can straighten things out."

"That's all I wrote about my first day's work—but not all I learned. I learned that my employer was generous, prosperous, drove a good bargain, that his wife was extravagant—and that he couldn't spell.

"The spelling is your job, Miss Lane," he was gruff but not unkind. "When other men were learning how to spell, I was finding out how many yards of aggregate goes ferred to Gratersford. The other two members of the gang are serving time. Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo described the trio as part of a gang which staged 20 holdups in Philadelphia and Bucks County.

Raymond Wright, on the witness stand, told of his father-in-law being beaten and robbed by the gang.

Judge Boyer told the trio that their offense was serious and that they knew that the two guns they had would be used. "You are yellow," said the Judge, when he referred to the gang holding up a man of Murry's age.

They were sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution and to serve not less than six nor more than 12 years with the sentences dating from the date of the robbery. This means that two of the group, Thomas McGrath and Welsh, will have to serve one year longer than they are now doing. The third member will not have to serve any additional time.

friendship for the United States but will encourage them to resist any German move to oust Marshal Petain as Chief of State, or to occupy all of France.

As a first step in this direction, the French Government would like to have the United States resume American Red Cross food shipments to France. A cargo of about 6,000 tons of concentrated foods and medical supplies allotted by the Red Cross to France has been lying in a warehouse for several months now, awaiting government approval of its shipment.

The French Government also would like to purchase a pound of American food per month for each of the 1,500,000 French war prisoners still held in German camps. The French have pointed out to the State Department that the British are permitted to send 20 pounds of food per month to each of their war prisoners in German camps.

Mildred Dilling, Noted Harpist, Well Received

Mildred Dilling, noted harpist, captivated music lovers of this area last evening when she appeared at the Bristol high school in the last of the 1941-42 concert series programs arranged by the Bristol Co-operative Concert Association, here.

Not only did she thrill with a wide range of selections from her vast repertoire, but delighted with a display of three additional harps, one dating back several centuries, and pleased with her instructive message regarding the history of the harp.

Miss Dilling's program of the evening was divided into four parts, and she was most generous with encores, or the audience of 600 which gave her an excellent ovation.

Attractively costumed in a gown of white sequins and tulle, and wearing a corsage of yellow rose-buds, Miss Dilling's blonde loveliness as she took her place beside the golden instrument, was accentuated by a background of golden-yellow forsythia in an unusual arrangement.

Her first group of numbers included: "Impromptu" (Faure); "Prelude" (Partita V) (Bach); "Rondeau des songes" (Rameau); and "La Victoire" (Dupuy). The next bracket included: "The March of the Men of Harlech" (a Welsh air); "Etude de Concert" (Godefrid); and "The Fountain" (Zabel), all of which she has recorded during the past few years; the fourth number being "Claire de lune" (Debussy).

Following intermission she presented "Liebestraum" (Liszt); "Hunting Song" (Grove); "Cordoba" (Albeniz); "Dance des lutins" (Rene); "Grey Donkeys on the Road to El Azil" (Touner); "The Forest Pool" (Touner); and "Legende des elfes" (Rene).

Her delightful encores included her own arrangement of "The Blue Danube," and Irish jig, "The Soldier's Joy," a bag-pipe tune and an imitation of an old-fashioned music box.

Miss Dilling, whose most famous pupil is Harpo Marx, showed three harps from her collection of more than 32. In presenting the history of the harp she traced the theory of the instrument from the beginning, telling that the inception was believed to have been with the hunter's bow, the hunter noting the tune given over as the bow was sprung. She added: "We are told that primitive man added a string to his bow, making an 'instrument' of two strings. I am sure it was primitive man and not primitive woman who did this, for primitive woman would have added a 'bean' to her string, rather than a string to her bow."

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O God, our Father, we thank Thee for the infinite quality of Thy person. Although infinity is beyond our comprehension, yet the fact that we cannot lose ourselves from the sight of a loving God and Father is one of the most comforting teachings of Thy Word. Impress upon our minds that regardless of how far we have gone astray, even there is God's hand beckoning us home; regardless of how glaring have been our violations, the ear of God is always present to hear our confession, the heart of God is there to grant us forgiveness. Bless those who have not known Thee, O God, and if it is Thy Will, lead them into a full knowledge of the Saviour, Jesus Christ, Amen.

The musician showed one of the oldest harps of her collection, dating between the 12th and 16th centuries; also displayed one instrument of 19 strings. It was on a copy of an Irish harp that she delighted with the Irish jig tune and "bag-pipe" selection.

case of Max Jankowski, Warrington, versus Emma Jankowski, Brown's Folly Road, also Warrington, the prayer of the libellant for a divorce A. V. M. from the respondent is refused and that the libel be dismissed with the costs to be paid by the libellant. They were married October 15, 1921, in Philadelphia. The respondent was charged with being cruel and barbarous.

Judge Boyer handed down an important decree in the suit in equity brought by Mrs. Ruth G. Kahn, of Elkins Park, owner of the building that houses the County Theatre, at Doylestown, against William Goldman Theatres, Inc.

The suit was brought in an effort to have a certain covenant contained in a deed from the respondent to the complainant, Mrs. Kahn, giving an option to the grantor to re-purchase the premises thereby conveyed—County Theatre, Doylestown—to be declared to have ceased and fully terminated through refusal to exercise same and to be a cloud on complainant's title.

Judge Boyer handed down the following decree:

"The Court having found the foregoing facts, and having reached the foregoing conclusions of law, it is hereby ordered and decreed that the said complainant, Ruth G. Kahn, having fully performed the said second and third covenants in said deed from the respondent to her, holds the said premises, known as County Theatre in Doylestown, and fully described in the deed from William Goldman Theatres, Inc., to Ruth G. Kahn, dated February 1, 1938, and recorded in the Recorder of Deed Book No. 655, page 31, in fee simple, forever free and discharged from any and all option rights of the said respondent, William Goldman Theatres, Inc., and it is further ordered and decreed that any sale, alienation or conveyance of the said premises hereafter made by the said Ruth G. Kahn shall be free and discharged of any cloud upon the title to said premises by reason of the said covenants contained in said deed.

"The Prothonotary is directed to enter this decree nisi and to give notice of the same to the parties or their counsel and, if no exceptions are filed thereto within 10 days thereafter, then this decree to be entered as the final decree herein."

Plan Victory Garden for Daily Vitamin Needs

Harvesting Swiss Chard, Leaving Roots to Bear Again.

The Victory Garden Committee of the Chicago metropolitan area has prepared a table of the vitamin values of fresh vegetables, compiled from latest authoritative data published in technical journals.

Instead of giving the vitamin count in terms of international units, milligrams or something else which might puzzle the novice, this table shows what percentage of the minimum daily requirements of each vitamin, one 3½ ounce portion of each vegetable will supply.

Remember about the percentage; it is important. The table, which follows, does not mean that a 3½ ounce portion of beet greens will give you 400 units of Vitamin A, but it will give you 400 percent—that is four times—of your minimum daily need of that particular vitamin.

The minimum requirement used in the table, is that which is recognized by the food and drug administration for labeling purposes. Since this standard was established, it has been discovered that buoyant health requires much larger amounts than this minimum, especially of Vitamin C. So plan your menus to give considerably more of each vitamin than the minimum which is designated by 100 per cent in the table.

Those who have read other vitamin tables will see that this list differs from some others. In fact, it is rare that any two vitamin tables agree. Take it as a guide to the relative values of the vegetables listed in vitamins only. It does not list all the nutritive values of vegetables, since it tells nothing about the minerals, proteins, fats and carbohydrates which are as important as vitamins.

This table will enable you to plan your Victory Garden production schedule so that as much as possible of your family's vitamin needs can be supplied from the garden. Here it is:

BASKETBALL TOURNEY TO BE COMPLETED TONIGHT

The Rohm & Haas round-robin basketball tourney will be completed tonight when three games will be played. In the first encounter, the Machine Shop meets Crystallite. Plexigum meets Laboratory Seven in the second tilt while in the final game, the Main Office meets the Plexiglas Office.

Laboratory Seven is undefeated in the tournament with four straight wins but still needs the triumph tonight to win. In the event of a Laboratory Seven defeat and a Machine Shop victory, the two clubs will be deadlocked for the championship and a playoff will be necessary.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE TO MEET TONIGHT

Another meeting of the Bristol Softball League is scheduled for tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Diamond Sporting Goods Store, Mill street. All interested parties are invited to attend and election of officers will be held.

At the initial meeting held last week, four teams attended: Fifth Ward Sporting Club, Franklin A. C., Bancroft-Hickey, and Profy's. Since then, Acting-President Daniel DiLorenzo has been searching for either two or four more clubs to complete the league.

Teams are requested to have their franchise money ready tonight so that the circuit may proceed with the schedule.

Civilian Defense Units of Four Districts Parade Here

The colors, followed by the Bristol Cadets, and then the emergency police and air-raid wardens of Tullytown and Bristol Township followed.

Robert B. Downing, chief of emergency police in Zone 2, had a large delegation in the parade; while Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., chief of air-raid wardens of Bristol Township, headed that group.

There were representations from Croydon, Croydon Manor, Maple Shade, West Bristol, Newportville, Edgely, Emille and Tullytown Borough.

From Bensalem came groups from Andalusia, Cornwells Heights, Eddington, Trevose, Neshaminy Falls and Newport Heights.

The emergency police wore their hats and badges, while the air-raid wardens wore arm bands.

The Scout Cubs and the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, and then came the massed colors carried by the Scouts. The Boy Scout Bicycle Messenger Corps was a feature, and the Sea Scouts from Andalusia made a good showing.

The second division led by the St. Francis Industrial School Band was composed of the Bensalem Township delegation and it was the hit of the parade.

The Bensalem Township high school band was another musical organization assigned to this division, and then followed the Emergency Police and the Air-Raid Wardens of the district. The Emergency Police wore white caps and added color to the group. The Andalusia group was followed by the Bucks County Rescue Squad, with two ambulances and a station wagon.

The Bristol delegation composed the last division and was led by the Bristol high school band which was liberally applauded. The Emergency Police of the first ward, and the emergency police and Air-Raid Wardens of the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth wards paraded and had good representations.

The Rescue Squad of the Bristol Blood Donors, with their life-boat, was part of the Bristol division.

The guests in the reviewing stand expressed many complimentary remarks about the demonstration. Burgess Anderson summed up the opinions of the various guests when he said: "It was a wonderful demonstration and those who participated are to be congratulated."

It was the first time that the Emergency Police and Air-Raid Wardens of this area have been grouped together so that the general public could see the scope of the organization set up for its protection. It was highly gratifying and were greatly pleased.

The Emergency Police chiefs included: Croydon, Paul Wilson; Croydon Manor, William Wainmer; Maple Shade and West Bristol, Joseph A. Seader; Newportville, Walter Boewker; Edgely and Emille, Thomas A. Livesey; Tullytown, James Magro; Bensalem Township, Harry Oliver; Cornwells Heights and Eddington, Elmer Vanzandt; Trevose, Harry Heller; Neshaminy Falls and Newport Heights, William Foster; Bristol, Joseph Stackhouse, Frank Mullhern, Joseph Duffy, Eugene Dugan, LeRoy Jenks, Roy F. Fry, Gaetano Greco, Arthur P. Brady, William F. Winslow, Samuel H. Conklin, Michael J. Murphy, William F. Brady, Daniel Ferry, Harry Arnold, C. M. Sampson, Lazzaro Rocco, Thomas Harper, Charles P. Alta, Charles Niccol, Alonzo Vansant, John A. Sackville, H. G. Mitchener.

"At the time we came here we were ready for any eventuality. We are just as ready today as any other day."

The general prides himself as a field soldier and the actions of the American forces under his command are more eloquent than verbal promises.

The troops are on field rations; there are few frills and the officers are treated no better than enlisted men. Every day, including Sunday, is a work day—Pearl Harbor and Hitler's offensives have proved war no respecter of the sabbath.

Iceland's alertness is nothing new. The day of America's entry into the war called for no changes in the United States forces here. The American garrison was just as ready that day as any other day.

What is more, General Bonesteel has been preparing his troops for close co-operation with the other fighting forces in the theatre.

Iceland was one of the first places in World War II at which American fighting men took up positions beside the British. Ever since there have been continued staff conferences between the various commands.

"There is very close co-operation and co-ordination," General Bonesteel told me, adding that this was due in measure to the "fine character" of his British counterpart, Maj. Gen. H. O. of invaded and invader. Gen. Bonesteel's tact has played its part in achieving a happier entente with the Icelanders.

For the weighty job he now holds, the general has had long military training as well as a long military heritage. His father and grandfather were West Point graduates and he was born on an Army post at Fort Sidney, Neb., in 1885. He was graduated from the U. S. military academy in 1908.

When America entered the World War, he was a captain in Hawaii. Transferred to the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps at Kelly Field, Texas, he learned to fly after six hours of dual instruction. He joined the Seventh Division in France as an infantry officer and saw active service.

After the war he served as the commander of the debarkation camp at Camp Morrison, Va., was a tactical instructor at West Point from 1919 to 1924 and then began further military schooling with intervals of service at other posts. He has been through the advanced course, the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., the Command and General Staff school at Leavenworth, Kan., and the Army War College.

He became a colonel in 1937, a brigadier general in 1940 and a major general in 1941. He commanded the Sixth Corps Area at Chicago from October 1940 to July 1941, went to the command of the Fifth Division at Fort Custer, Mich., and came to Iceland last September.

At 57, General Bonesteel is tall, thin, erect, giving an impression of vigor. He is firm willed but his keen eyes are set in kindly laugh wrinkles. His hair is gray, cut short in accepted military fashion.

He wears a trench coat and carries a riding crop but otherwise throughout the day he is attired in the field clothes of a soldier. Only the two gleaming stars of his rank distinguish him from a private.

The general spends a great deal of his time touring the camps under his command and he has a friendly habit of stopping enlisted men and asking them how they are getting along.

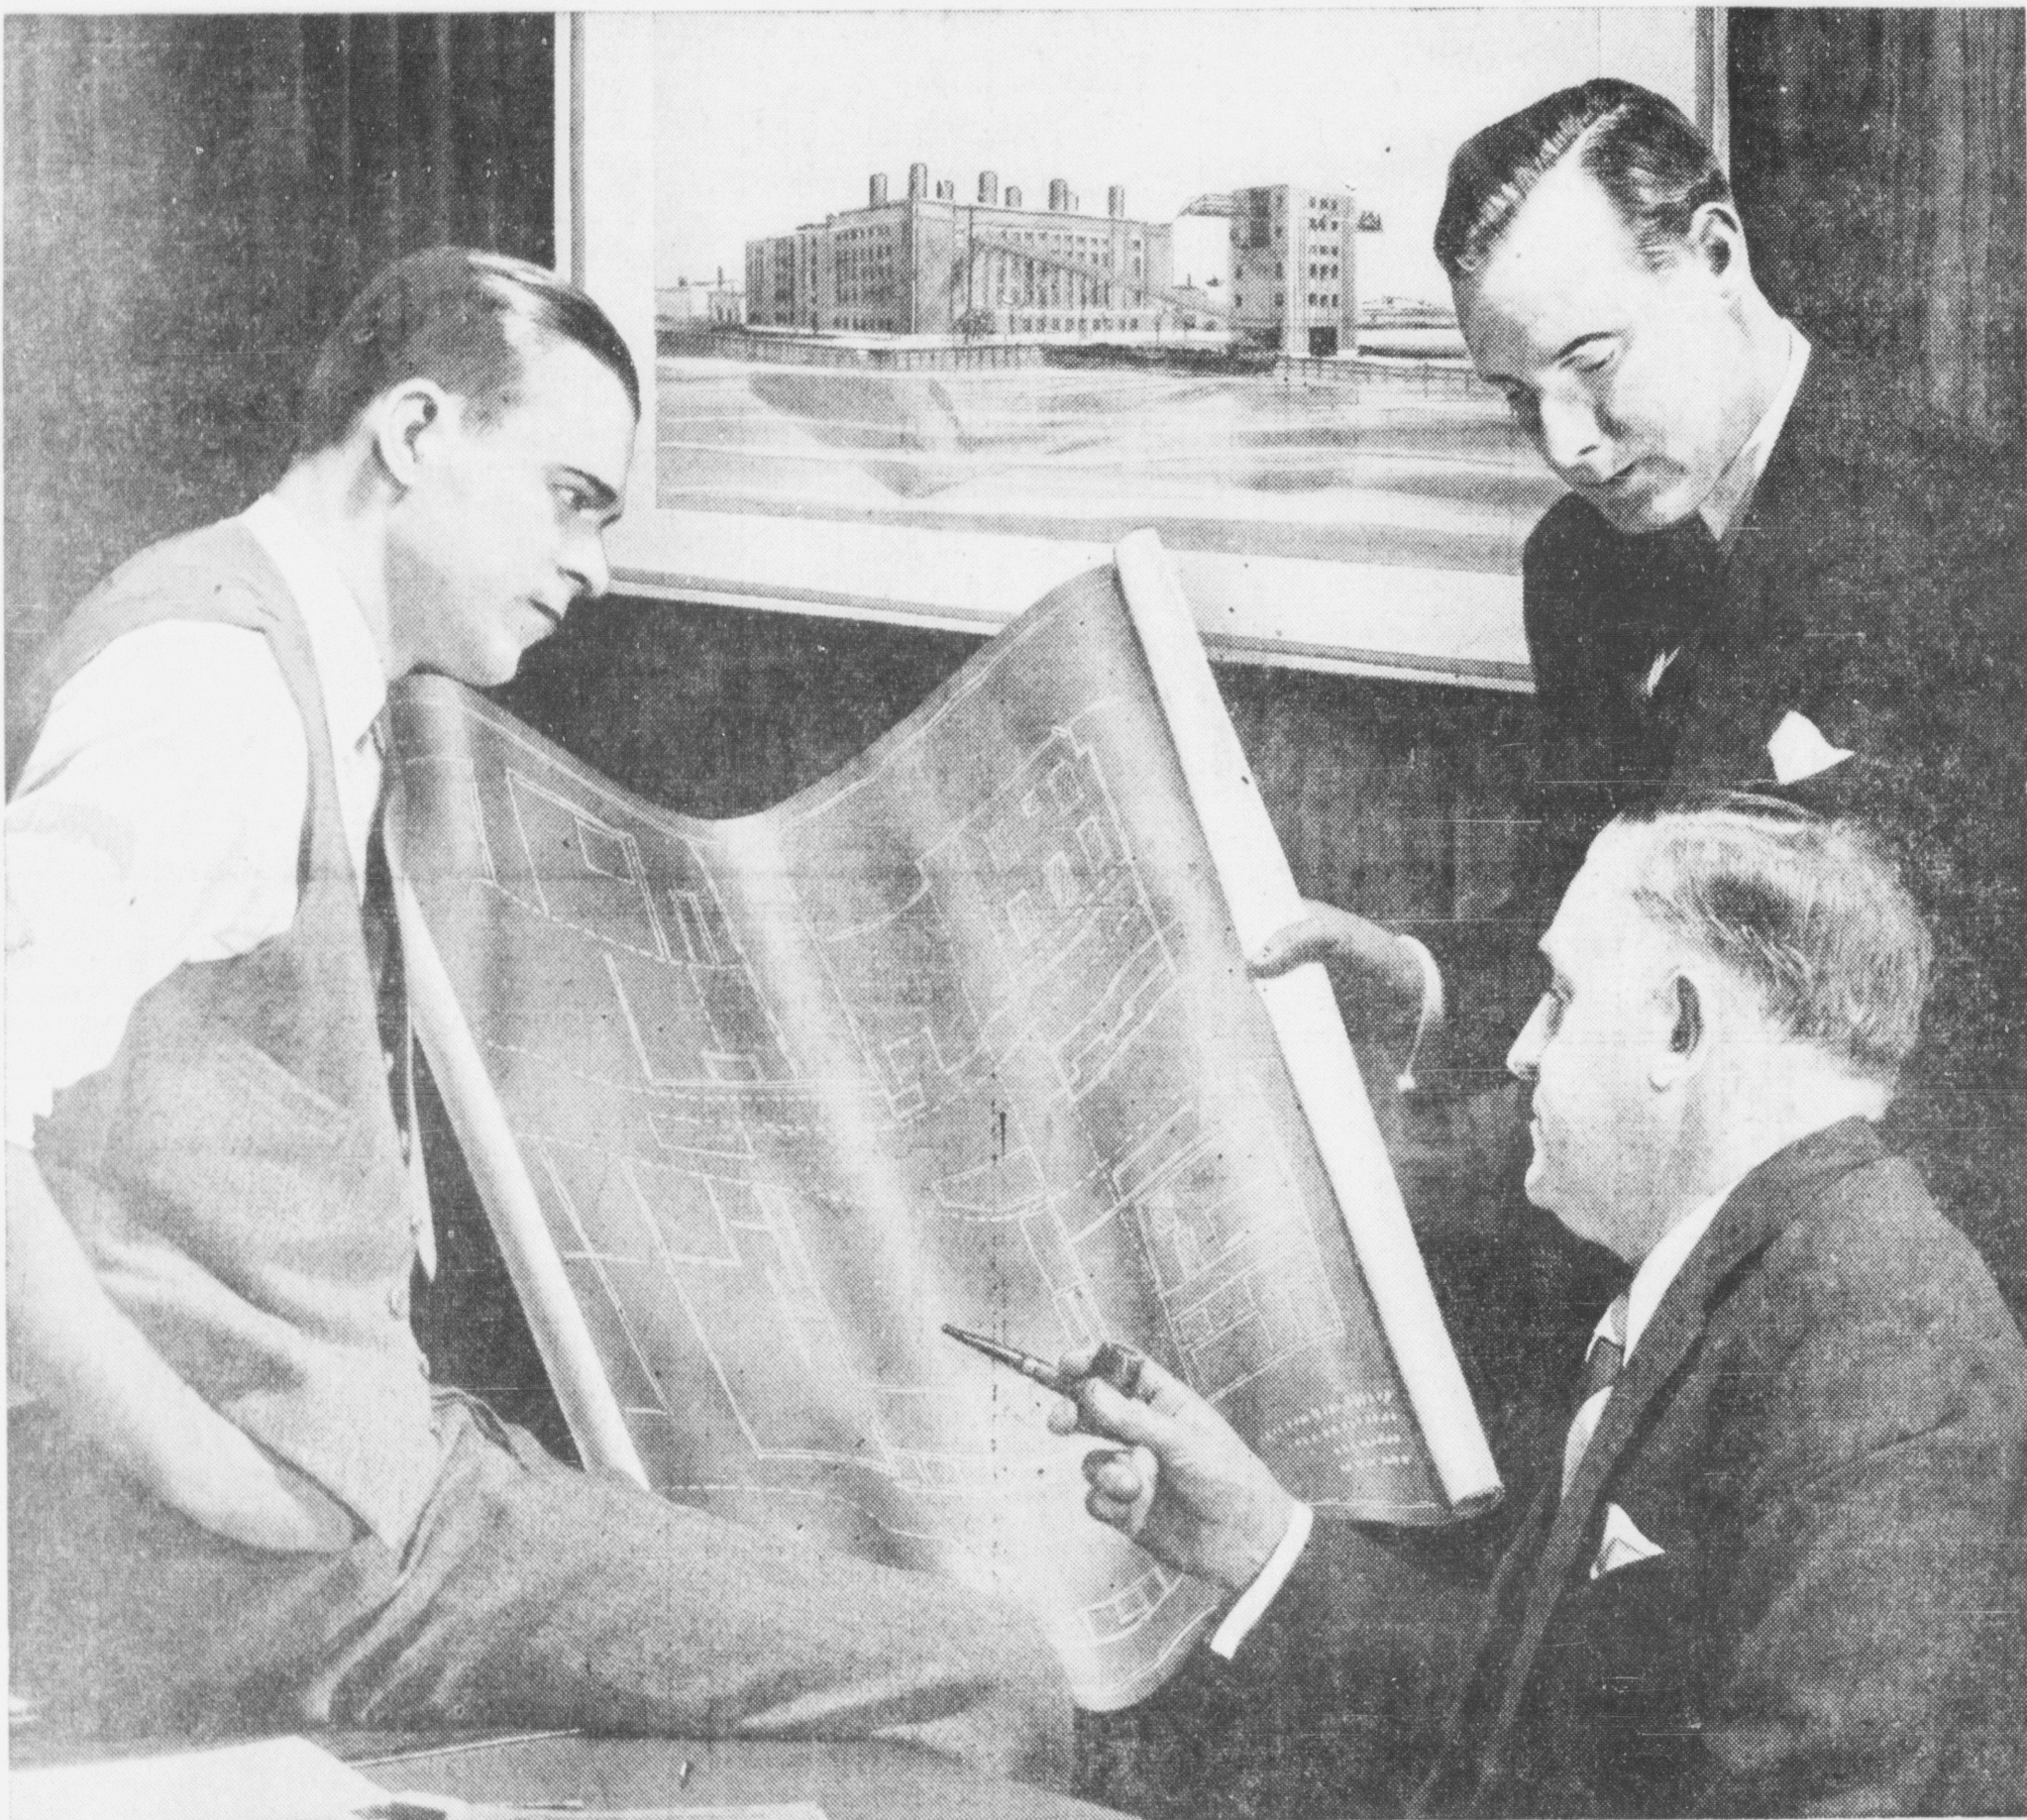

His office at headquarters is an unpretentious Nissen hut in close communication with his chief of staff, Brig. Gen. John L. Homer, and other staff officers.

Among them he has a reputation for thinking in detail and requiring the following of his orders down to the last step of execution.

His son, Charles H. Bonesteel, III, a captain in the engineers, a West Point graduate and a Rhodes scholar, was in Iceland for several months but has since been transferred for duty elsewhere. The general has two grandsons who may carry the military heritage of the Bonesteels still further.

There is no word or action from General Bonesteel or his Icelandic forces indicating that the wartime days of spring may bring combat to this of the troops, emerging from a long North Atlantic island. But the feeling of the troops, emerging from a long winter of garrison duty, is: "Let them come."

PLANNING AHEAD FOR TOMORROW'S NEEDS

"Speed Up!" America orders.

Industry goes into high gear. New plants spring into being, old ones expand and the chart of electrical consumption shoots up like a rocket in flight.

But is Philadelphia ready for this rapid expansion? Yes it is. Here's why...

Behind the scenes at the Philadelphia Electric Company a group of experts is at work today, every day—year in, year out.

It is their job to see that this area is never caught unprepared. War industrial growth, changing residential trends, new swings in appliance uses, all are measured, carefully charted in terms of demand for electricity. And to meet this forecast, specific plans are formed... first for a ten-year period, then in more detail for five and finally in meticulous detail for each year in advance.

The value of this foresight never was more apparent than in P.E.'s preparations now in full swing to guard against tomorrow's emergency needs.

For instance—

In 1938 our capacity was stepped up 50,000 kilowatts by a new topping turbine.

In 1941 50,000 kilowatts were added by a new turbine installation.

In 1942 another 80,000 kilowatts are scheduled to be added to the P.E. Company System. This capacity improvement was begun in August, 1940.

Our new generating station, on which initial construction work has already begun, is scheduled to add an ultimate of 600,000 kilowatts of capacity. This eventually will be one of the largest steam generating plants in the world.

So it goes, in good times and bad, war or peace.

Your neighbors who operate the Philadelphia Electric are constantly alert to your changing needs and are sparing no effort in planning to have service on tap when you need it.

DO YOU KNOW?

P.E. experts, with others, pioneered in the development of the use of high pressure generating—the topping turbine method—which provides higher efficiency and greater economy from old established stations and therefore better service at lower cost.
